Nicholas,

Per the local rules, any opposed motion to extend a filing deadline must be filed at least 72 hours prior to the deadline. Accordingly, we intend to file our motion to today.

Thanks,
Katie

Thanks, Nicolas. To clarify, we are not saying that any plaintiffs in the other matters have not agreed. We are just unable to confirm at this time that all plaintiffs agree, particularly since it appears that the plaintiffs in a number of the remaining actions have conferred and now are all seeking unanimous consent from the other plaintiffs before consenting. Of course, if more than one plaintiff takes this position, it will be impossible to ever get unanimous consent, despite the fact that all plaintiffs may indeed be willing to agree if all others agree. This is particularly problematic for this case, which has one of the earliest deadlines to respond. Furthermore, we fail to see how our clients' response deadlines in other actions has any bearing on the Rubin plaintiffs' ability to grant us the requested extension.

We will go ahead and put our motion together. Please let me know by Monday morning if you reconsider.

Best,
Katie

Thank Katie. As I said, I would agree if all other Plaintiffs' counsel agree. But if you can't get agreement from all of them, then I suggest you make your motion.

Nicholas,

Nice meeting you over the phone. As discussed, we'd like to file an agreed motion extending our response deadline to 28 days after expiration (or denial) of the stay requested by Facebook. You indicated that you would be willing to agree to an extension on the condition that every other plaintiff also agreed to an extension. At this point, we have agreements from at least nine of the other Plaintiffs and are following up with the remaining few. No one has refused to agree to our extension.

Please let me know if you are amenable to the requested extension (or have a counter-proposal). Given our imminent deadline to respond in your case (April 24), if we are not able to reach an agreement soon, we plan on moving for an extension.

Thanks,
Katie
